The potential of a singular focus on anatomy is realized in its ability to bring to bear all perspectives, patient and practitioner, allopath and homeopath. By no means a light read, but well worth the effort.

Thisbookisartfullydone,athorough-goinginvestigationofanintriguing Rhetoric is a growing field of research within both the rhetoric of science and composition studies; our medical rhetoric workshop at the RSA Institute enrolled over 25 participants. And historical studies in medical discourse have told us about the development of professions and scientific disciplines.
